GENERAL NEWS.

Here's Your Mule.

NEW YORK, November 5.—The Times in one of its squibs says: "What right has Barnum to survive the disaster with his proclamation containing a mass of misinformation has brought about. Garfield is elected and the country knows it. Let us have peace. By his proclamation Mr. Barnum is proving he has all the obstinacy with but little of the intelligence of a mule.

Effect of the Forged Letter.

NEW YORK, November 5.—President Hayes said to a reporter regarding the election that California, Oregon and Nevada rightfully belonged to the republican party and that they would have doubtless given larger majorities for Garfield had it not been for the effect of the forged Chinese letter. People in these states were very deeply interested in the Chinese question and the Morey letter was probably calculated to move their prejudices.

NEW YORK, November 5.—The Times has a column editorial on California and Nevada. It says: In all the forecasts of the presidential canvass of 1880, California and Nevada have been classed as doubtful. Knowing this was a just view of the case, the democrats who despaired of carrying one or two of the larger northern states, concocted what is called the Chinese letter. To a certain extent this forgery has affected the result.

This effect is greatest, perhaps, in the First congressional district of California in which Gen. Rosecranz has been elected over Davis, but "Old Rosy," as his familiar friends call him, is personally popular and the democrats were wise in putting him forward as their candidate. But unless Rosecranz has become a different man he will make them very sorry before his term of office expires that they have sent him to congress. A more erratic, wilful or cranky man does not anywhere exist. He will vote as he pleases when in congress regardless of party obligations and party necessities, as though he had never known what a political organization was. Rosecranz is an honest man but he is an unpractical theorist and a dreamer.

Barnum's Buncomb

NEW YORK, November 5. The Times says: Some wild rumors appear to be current in Philadelphia and elsewhere that the vote of New York will not be counted for Garfield, that a democratic congress will not permit it, and telegrams have been sent from various parts of the country expressing great alarm at this new danger to the stability of the country. Mr. Kelly and the state committee may cry "fraud" and institute investigations, but they are so obviously constrained to do something to divert attention from their own blunders that this need excite no surprise.

The Tribune says. Barnum will be well to stop right where he is. The business public are in no mood to tolerate seditious bravery. No human being in New York doubts that the state has honestly and irrevocably gone republican, to threaten to thwart the will of the people is folly because Barnum can no more do it than ride into heaven on one of his mules. But it is also a crime because to the extent to which anybody supposed him to represent his party it would mean delay, confusion and disaster. Let Barnum stop his vaporing about fraud and step down and out, otherwise he can only escape being ridiculous by becoming infamous.

It is reported that McPherson expresses the fear that the democratic governors of states will withhold the certificates from men elected and give them to democrats who were not elected to make the organization of the house democratic. It is hardly probable that any southern governor will be so bold in crime as to do this thing.

Congratulating the President Elect

NEW YORK, November 5.—The Herald's Cleveland special says: A party of Clevelanders and General Gorham were the only persons who visited Garfield yesterday. Among the congratulations received was the following:

PARIS, November 4.

General Garfield, president elect of the United States:

I hasten to address you my sincere congratulations.

[Signed] FERDINAND DE LESSEPS.

Fair and Sharon.

NEW YORK, November 5. Regarding Fair and Sharon the Times says: So far as the men are concerned the senate of the United States will not gain or lose by the change of senators. In Nevada Sharon the habitual absentee has incidentally done his best to destroy the republican majority in the little state which courtesy called his own.

Evident Fraud.

NEW YORK, November 5. Superintendent Walling says the thirty-five ballot boxes at police headquarters in relation to which so much mystery prevails were taken to headquarters, in order to ascertain the truth of the rumors that a number of votes had been cast for William S. Dowd, republican candidate for mayor, instead of William Dowd and had been thrown out as defective. Had the law been recognized in such cases the ballots would undoubtedly have been counted for the republican candidate. A reporter enveavored to court the defective votes thrown out on the canvassers' return on election day but was forced to discontinue his work by Chief O'Brien of the election bureau.

An American Missionary's Death Avenged.

WASHINGTON, November 5.—Postmaster-General Maynard received a private letter from Constantinople, bringing information that an argument had been delivered in the Ottoman criminal court in the case of the three men implicated in the murder of the Rev. Parsons, the American missionary. The actual perpetrator of the deed was condemned to death and the other two to fifteen years imprisonment with hard labor.

Brave Words Gent

COLUMBIA, S. C., November 5.—The Daily Register to-day in its leading editorial says: "Now with Garfield in the presidential chair, for whom the republicans have claimed so much in the way of ability and statesmanship, we shall see what we shall see. One thing is certain, if he is half the man he is claimed to be, if he is only half a statesman in the true sense of the word he will hold his own and be his own successor in '64. Not only this, if he bravely and broadly thinks.

The North is Solid Because.

CHICAGO, November 5.—The Times editorially comments on the southern papers, particularly on the Charleston News and Courier and says the great mass of the northern people are free from any vindictive feeling toward the south. They are opposed to southern supremacy because such speeches as Wade Hampton's made at Staunton and Blackburn's on wiping out post bellum legislation have led to doubt whether the results of war were secure.

Good for Key

CHICAGO, November 5.—The Inter-Ocean's Washington special reported from Chattanooga that ex Postmaster General Key voted the republican ticket at the recent election. The fact is Key has been little less than a republican since the war closed and his voting the straight republican ticket occasions no surprise.

Mississippi Election Frauds

VICKSBURG, November 5.—The republican majority on joint ballot in the legislature will be 69.

The election commissioners of Warren county, composed of two democrats and one republican, threw out 2,059 Garfield tickets and 2,091 for Lynch, republican candidate for congress, on the ground that they were not in legal form under the laws of Mississippi.

Stormy Times Ahead

CHICAGO, November 5.—The Inter-Ocean's Washington says: The republicans won a great victory in electing a governor, congressman and 47 legislators. The state credit men are in the ascendancy and the session beginning in January will be stormy.

Figures on the House

CHICAGO, November 5.—The Inter Ocean's Washington special says: The republicans will control the house of representatives, but it will be by a narrow majority. The figures just made up at the republican congressional rooms from the latest dispatches show a republican majority of not more than three and possibly one. In this, however, only republicans are counted, the greenbackers being classed as the opposition.

Kate Chase Sprague's Divorce.

NEW YORK, November 5.—The Sun says: Winchester Britton, ex-district attorney of Kings county, has been retained to bring an action for divorce for Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague against ex-Governor Sprague. He will have the papers ready for service in a few days. Britton on his visit to Providence last week, framed the replevin papers for a piano and a portion of Mrs Sprague's wardrobe, and placed them in the hands of the sheriff to serve. He has since learned they have been served.

Tammany's Wail

NEW YORK, November 5.—At a meeting of the Tammany Hall general committee to-night, an address to the democrats of the country was read claiming Hancock's defeat is due to fraud, intimidation and the use of enormous sums of money by the republicans. The address concludes as follows: The rage and frenzy of the hour will pass away and the sober judgment of the American people will reassume its sway. The democratic party with clean hands will be born which will bear aloft the ark of our political covenant, and will present itself once more for the suffrages of the people. Through defeat we will yet attain to assured victory. One of the wisest men who ever lived said: "None can aspire to act greatly but those who are of force greatly to suffer."

[Signed] JOHN KELLY.

Missouri.

ST. LOUIS, November 5.—Latest returns from the sixth congressional district elect Hazelton, greenback-republican, over Waddle, democrat, by about 500 majority.

Minnesota

ST. PAUL, November 5.—The presidential count of the vote by counties is just completed. Garfield's majority is about 40,000. The majorities in congressional districts are as follows: 9,000 in the first; 5,600 in the second, and 8,000 in the third. The legislature stands: senate republican, 35; democrats, 10; house—republicans, 85; democrats, 13; independent and greenbackers, 10.

Iowa.

DES MOINES, November 5.—The republican state committee is still estimating that Iowa will give 80,000 majority for Garfield. Following are the returns of the majorities for Garfield by congressional districts:

|---|---|
| First | 6,000 |
| Second | 5,200 |
| Third | 3,500 |
| Fourth | 16,000 |
| Fifth | 8,000 |
| Sixth | 7,000 |
| Seventh | 8,000 |
| Eighth | 10,000 |
| Ninth | 12,000 |

The fourth district gave the largest majority ever given by any congressional district in the union. Four of the districts are solid for Garfield, every county in them giving him a majority. Only four counties of the ninety-nine in the state gave Hancock a majority over Garfield.

California.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 5.—This morning's papers make the vote of the state practically appear to be that Garfield will have a plurality of 500 to 1,000.

Texas.

GALVESTON, November 5.—The indications are that Jones, independent greenbacker, will be elected to congress in the Fifth district, defeating Sheppard, previously reported elected, by a small majority. Later returns may alter this news.

Nevada

SAN FRANCISCO, November 5.—Nevada will give Hancock about 600 majority.

NEW YORK, November 5. The following dispatch has been received at republican head quarters this morning:

VIRGINIA CITY, Nov. 4

To the Hon. S. W. Dorsey:

Full returns have not come in. The indications are that Hancock has carried the state by a small majority. The legislature, congressman and supreme judges are democratic. The cause is local issues and the Chinese letter.

(Signed,) JOHN H. MACKAY.

Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, November 5.—Official returns from 48 of the 67 counties of Pennsylvania, and calculated returns from each of the other counties make Garfield's plurality, 37,341.

Nothing Important in the Morey Case.

NEW YORK, November 5.—Nothing of importance took place to-day in the Morey letter inquiry and the examination was adjourned till Tuesday next to give the defense an opportunity to bring some witnesses from Massachusetts.

Discussing the Defeat

NEW YORK, November 5.—Both factions of the democrats both here and in Brooklyn are abusing each other heartily on the result of the election. Each accuses the other of treachery and incompetency and the quarrel bids fair to create even a wider breach between the factions than already exists.

The World says the responsibility for democratic defeat is placed by the democrats at large upon the shoulders of the democrats of New York. We regard this responsibility as beyond doubt rightly placed. The democrats of this city know now that they cannot possibly lose anything by refusing to follow any blind leaders whom they have hitherto followed, or to make the votes of honest men the stakes of desperate political gamblers or to depend upon the support of politicians who cannot be taught to know a brick wall when they see it.

The Herald says John Kelly has simply repeated the tactics by which he gave the state to Cornell. He has simply acted upon this one principle, that the party, country, presidency, all things and everything might better go to the dogs than for John Kelly to lose his hold upon that fatness of patronage—the $20,000,000 of our municipal expenditures.

The Sun says: From ditch to ditch, deeper and deeper into the mire John Kelly leads the democratic party. We are tired of drumming up recruits for the democratic party only to have them at the end of four long years led not to victory but into death by blundering political manipulators.

The Times says: "It does not seem to have occurred to our democratic contemporaries engaged in finding party scapegoats that the chief need of the democracy is more intelligence, more conscience and more votes. It is the party that is responsible for Kelly and McLaughlin, who have endowed the party with the ignorance, dishonesty and servility which render their existence possible. When Kelly is dethroned and McLaughlin banished the headship of party in New York and Kings will still be the prize of some vulgar, mercenary demagogue. The democrats who object to "bossism" should found a new party. The majority of their associates are perfectly content with their masters.

The Leadville Democrat is about a week behind the times. It has not heard what occurred on Tuesday.

The Sun says it is tired of drumming up recruits for the democratic party. It is sort of disagreeable work after all.

South papers, since the reading of Hancock's tariff letter, have been led to remark that the pen is more dangerous than the sword.

The sixth precinct of El Paso county is the banner precinct in the state of its size. Out of the 414 votes cast only 75 were democratic.

The News has behaved so well since the election that we are inclined to take back some harsh criticisms. It has accepted its defeat in a manly way and has not charged fraud.

The reports that Mr. Garfield will ignore Mr. Blaine are unfounded. Mr. Garfield will recognize all republican leaders, but will not forget the party that made them and him.

El Paso county still maintains its position as the banner republican county. From the present returns, it has cast the largest republican majority in the state except Arapahoe.

The Huerfano Herald is the name of a newspaper published at La Veta and edited by J. B. King. It is the only paper in Huerfano county and will be a decided help to it.

Garfield should remember in appointing his cabinet that he is under the greatest obligations to the business men who rallied to his support and gave the republican party its great victory.

Z. L. White, who visited Colorado as the representative of the New York Tribune, has settled down in Providence as the editor of the Providence Press. He has made great improvements in the paper.

The man who did most to give the republicans their great victory last Tuesday is Rutherford B. Hayes whose conservative course inspired confidence in business and led business men to look to the republican party for further prosperity.

The engagement of Senator Chaffee's daughter to Ulysses S. Grant, Jr. cannot have been of long standing. Chaffee opposed Grant very bitterly at Chicago. He would not have done this had Grant been about to become his daughter's father-in-law.

Iowa is the banner republican state of the union. It did nobly on Tuesday and her sons have reason to be proud of her. We are informed that her majority for Garfield is almost identical with the number she furnished to put down the rebellion of 1861 65.

A despatch from Leadville states that Hon. J. C. Helm has been elected judge of the fourth judicial district by over 700 majority. This is a great victory considering the various interests which his friends had to combat in the canvass. This district is to be congratulated on having its highest judicial position occupied by so worthy a man.

It was the business men, not the bummers, who decided the result, and who should give color to Garfield's administration. [Denver News.

This is the truth. It is said that Mr. Garfield is under great obligations to Senator Conkling and others but he is not. The business men of the country elected him and to them he is under the greatest obligations.

It is a mistake to say that the republicans reduced the democratic majority in New York because of John Kelly. The vote for Grace, mayor, is proof of this. John Kelly nominated Grace against the advice of other leaders. If he had traded with Arthur, it would have been on the basis of republicans voting for Grace and democrats voting for Garfield. But the vote for Grace shows that no such trade was made. The republicans owe their gain in New York to the interest that the business men in the city manifested in the contest. Many had not been in the habit of voting, but this year not only voted but worked incessantly for the success of the republican ticket. The large registration in Brooklyn and New York was largely due to the registration of a large class which has not voted since the downfall of the Tweed ring in 1872.

THE SOLID SOUTH

The Leadville Democrat is considerably exercised about our criticisms on the solid south. This is gratitude. When such a course was exceedingly unpopular in Colorado we supported President Hayes' course in regard to South Carolina and Louisiana. We shall urge that President Garfield pursue a like course. We believe that the national government should not interfere with local affairs in the south. We are opposed to the use of troops in the south. Still we believe that the government has a right to make laws regarding the election of congressmen and secure to its citizens the rights granted in the constitution. We have always opposed any interference, however, beyond the civil authority. If it shall be necessary to use force to secure these rights, the government had better become a monarchy at once or else treat the south as conquered provinces. But we believe if the south does deprive the negro of his vote and the civil power is not efficient in securing this right to them, that the public sentiment of the north should be aroused because of this injustice, and that our ballots should indicate to the south that it cannot hope for power in the national councils so long as it is unfair. Such a course as this will have the best kind of influence. The fact that the democratic party last Tuesday could not get but 17 of the 231 electoral votes of the north because of the south solid through shot guns and tissue ballots, will have a better effect than the presence of an army of 50,000 soldiers in the south. The Charleston News and Courier recognizing the logic of this fact, already advises the south to break its allegiance with the democratic party. We believe that the result of the election on Tuesday is the greatest step yet taken in the settlement of the southern question. It will send the Wade Hamptons to the rear and bring forward men of more liberal and conservative tendencies. It is the voice of the north which will be as potent as it was at Appomattox. The south is emphatically told that it cannot continue the shot gun and tissue ballot longer and maintain influence in the national councils. It must recognize the binding force of the fourteenth and fifteenth constitutional amendments.

In this connection we may add that the north did not raise the sectional issue in this campaign. In 1874 and 1875 the republican party was ignominiously defeated in the north because of it. In 1876 the republican party gave up the issue and adopted a platform favoring a liberal policy to the south. Still it failed to carry New York, Connecticut and Indiana, all of which states went republican this year. The south raised the issue by its ungrateful bearing toward President Hayes, by its injustice to the negro and by its failure to respond in any degree to the conciliatory policy of the north. For four years free speech and a free ballot have been unknown in the south. The elections have become a farce. The republican party has no organization in the states lately in rebellion except in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Texas, though in Mississippi, South Carolina and Alabama the majority of the voters are republicans, and their electoral votes could have been cast for Garfield had there been a free ballot. The north don't want a sectional issue. It will cease to be solid when the south ceases to be solid. It will cease to wave the bloody shirt when an American citizen can exercise his dearest right as freely in Mississippi as in Massachusetts. It is entirely within the power of the south to say whether there shall be another campaign with the sectional issue prominent.

Solid South Broken.

The editorial from the Charleston News and Courier, published in our dispatches this morning, shows that the south is tired of its alliance with the democratic party. The wisdom of General Grant's speech at Warren is certain to be vindicated before the winter is over. The one way to break up the solid south was to teach it that it will not be allowed to rule. This way has been taken, and, satisfied that the inevitable is before it, it will break away from the democracy and join heartily with the north for the best interests of the union. This is certain to be the result of last Tuesday's work.—[Denver Tribune.

The Chinese Issue at the Springs.

Somebody posted up near the polls in precinct 6½ about 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the Rocky Mountain News extra, containing the fac simile of the Chinese letter, and Barnum's lying telegram that Hart had been released by the court from the charge of libel, and after that the democratic vote in that precinct was perceptibly lighter. The respectable democrats would give a grand shy when they came to the corner, go clear round the crowd, pick up a republican ticket and vote it. The respectable democrats of El Paso county did not even want Hancock elected by forgery.—[Mountaineer.

What Did It.

Some democrats croak that money has carried the election for the republicans. Such is not the case. It is the firm confidence of the mass of the people in republican government, and the desire to "let well enough alone."—[Leadville Herald.

WHO THE PRISONER IS

A Sketch of the Tool of the Democratic National Committee

Kenward Philp, the assistant editor of the Truth, who was yesterday arrested for complicity in the forgery of the Chinese letter, is a little fellow with a high forehead and a restless eye. His reputation as a practical joker is a metropolitan if not national, and he is never perfectly happy unless when engaged in the perpetration of something funny. If it be true that he is the author of the Chinese letter, it is then without doubt that he did the thing for the purpose of gratifying his desire to quietly enjoy the discomfiture its publication would occasion. He has been a politician in the local affairs of Brooklyn for many years, although he has never been naturalized and never attempted to vote. He is the bosom friend of Thomas Kinsella, the editor of the Brooklyn Eagle, a democratic organ, and was at one time employed on that paper as a general writer. His business of late years has been serial story writing of the blood-and-thunder character for Norman L. Monroe's Family Story Paper, and when the Dramatic News was started his were the earliest and most readable contributions.

A JOLLY DOG.

Philp is about 38 years of age, an Englishman by birth, and is the son of the founder and one time editor of the London Standard. He is a descriptive and humorous writer of the very highest order of ability, and as companionable and jolly a dog as any one would care to know. As the editor of a recently deceased but once brilliant journal, the Brooklyn Sunday Sun, he kept the staid inhabitants of the City of Churches in a condition of the greatest excitement by his exasperating personalities. He seemed gifted with the power of penetrating the weaknesses of people, and was so uniformly successful in hitting the mark that there was never a period during his editorship that he wasn't pursued by at least a dozen irate citizens who would have been glad of the opportunity to quarter him. A fellow of infinite jest, he never found himself in a position from which he could not escape with his colors flying, and his ability to get out of a tight place without a scratch is proverbial.

BOHEMIANISM ON THE FERRY.

He was once in New York on a lark, and, as was usual with him, spent all his money and exhausted his resources for the replenishment of his purse before he thought of returing home to Brooklyn. It was only a penny to cross the ferry, but Philp had even that. His credit was exhausted with the ferry gate keeper, and to most men under similar circumstances the case would appear hopeless. Philp only chuckled as he cut a button from his coat and slowly approached the ferry-gate. Crowds were filing through the narrow passage-way at the foot of Fulton street, so he waited until the whistle blew and the boat was about to start. Then he rushed through the gate, and, throwing his button down, managed to get inside the railing before the ferry-keeper detected the fraud. When the latter called to him to come back, Philp, with a patronizing flourish of his hand, told him to "never mind the change," and sprang upon the boat just as it was leaving the dock. After that he always visited New York by the way of the Wall street ferry.

HIS PRACTICAL JOKES.

He would stop on Broadway where the crowds were thickest, and peer down a coal-grating in the sidewalk with a facial expression of the utmost horror, and when the street became impassable from the crowds that had gathered to see what was the matter, Philip would slip off and chuckle at his little joke. When it is known that he is little above five feet high and built in proportion, the absurdity of his published challenge in the Clipper, some years ago to fight any man in the world at catch-weights, will be appreciated.

People of the pious sort have always been the victims of his jealousy. At a Methodist revival in Brooklyn, some years ago, he presented himself at the mourners' bench, and, after his supposed conversion delivered a prayer which was a model of earnestness and simplicity. Having accused himself of almost every conceivable crime, entering into the details of at least fifteen horrible murders which he had commited, he horrified the assembled worshipers by drawing a paint-brush across his throat and rushing out of the building, apparently bleeding to death. As a writer he was, and still is, versatile and brilliant. He wrote a series of sketches for the Eagle some time ago, under the heading of which were as captivating as anything ever written by Dickens himself. It was a source of great pleasure to him to write an article in one paper and then tear it to pieces in an opposition journal, and nothing gave him greater delight than to blackguard himself. The Dramatic News used to assail him in the most violent manner, attributing to him the most outrageous offenses known to the law. At the time these attacks appeared Philp was practically editor of the paper, and was himself the sole author of the abuse. He is a man of the most prodigal liberality, a welcome guest wherever he presents himself, and is a pretty fair sample of the once famous but now almost extinct race of metropolitan Bohemians. That he is now quietly laughing at all the commotion he has occasioned, if, in reality he be the author of the Chinese letter, is very likely.

A SIMILAR CRIME CHARGED AGAINST HIM.

This is not the first time Philp has tried his hand at forgery, although in the previous case he did not get into the courts. In the Kings county democratic convention in 1876, there was a sharp contest for the Surrogateship between Messrs. Daly and Livingston, and the latter was only successful by one vote. While things were at a critical point a petition purporting to be signed by prominent citizens of Brooklyn, was handed to the convention, urging the nomination of William D. Veeder, then Surrogate. It was afterward ascertained that many of the signatures to the petition were forged, and it is said that the forger was Kenward Philp.

TRACING THE FORGERY.

A dispatch from Philadelphia to the New York Tribune says: "That the Morey letter was not so bungling a forgery as was at first supposed will doubtless be proven by a [illegible] which [illegible] has been discovered here to-day. The [illegible] turns out to be the [illegible] of General Garfield [illegible] in 1875.

This letter was received from the Truth office evidently by accident, and is at present in the hands of a citizen of Philadelphia. Accompanying it were other letters signed by General Garfield, but written by an amanuensis. They are much worn and have been pasted together at the back. These letters were seen by the Tribune correspondent, as well as by a prominent member of the Philadelphia bar, and by a business man of this city. It is quite evident that the letter of 1875 was used as a model for the forgery, and this will account for the discrepancies in style between the present handwriting of General Garfield and that in the forged Chinese letter.

MAJOLICA.

The Home of the Manufacture of the Beautiful Ware

Pesaro, says a correspondent of the New York Evening Post, is a little old town on the Adriatic, its walls overlook the blue sea, and fig trees grow within a short distance of breaking waves on a delightful beach. Up there, hidden away by the nearer hills, is the birthplace of Raphael, and, still further, is Gubbio, famous for its Gubbio ware and its great painter of majolica, Maestro Giorgio. From the margin of the sea to the naked slopes of the Apennines is found the fine and famous clay of Pesaro, with which its majolica was made. Venice imported this clay for her "Venus porcelaine." The most flourishing period of majolica painting in Pesaro was 400 years ago when the duke of Urbino commissioned Battista Franco, a Venetian painter, to make designs for vases and plates, and bought at high prices all the drawings of Raphael he could procure, which, with engravings of Marc Antonio, he gave to his majolica painters. Pesaro and Loretto are now the two places in Italy which have unrivaled collections of majolica, and this one of Pesaro is perhaps surpassed by none. Half a million francs was refused by the municipality of Pesaro for this collection, which is rightly valued as the peculiar and appropriate glory of the town, which is also the birthplace of Rossini.

The taste and passion for antique majolica can only be gratified by princes and millionaires. Once in the hands of the antiquarians, rare majolica plates and vases cost as much as plates of gold and silver. The Queen of Sweden is said to have offered their weight in gold for the Loretto vases. Moorish plates or Hispano-Arabic plates were the first models of the Italian majolica makers. Not only did Loretto and Pesaro produce this beautiful ware, but Pisa, Genoa, Milan and Florence also. The collection at Pesaro is richest in plates. The walls of two rooms in the town hall are covered with this beautiful pottery. And what a revelation of taste and invention are these lustrous objects, iridescent like mother-of-pearl, white like shells, or blue like lapis lazuli, ruby-red and gold, on which the most clever artists have traced with a sure and light hand arabesque, painted portraits of mythological and sacred subjects, coats of arms and borders, and patterns of wild and curious fancy. It is a tradition that Raphael himself painted majolica, and that Titian and Dosso Dossi were employed in making designs.

A Bouffe Funeral.

Nobody has ever explained why the French, who are the gayest and wittiest people in the world, and the most ingenious in devising new varieties of humor, are capable, beyond all others, of doing the most ridiculous things without consciousness of their absurdity. They have just buried the composer of "La Belle Helene," with a parade of ceremony and lamentation which seem not unlike an act out of his own burlesques. The celebration of his genius and virtues in the press has been followed by pompous obsequies at the Church of the Madeleine. Distinguished artists and musicians followed the coffin to the foot of the altar; actresses went into hysterics during the service; tourists came in throngs to see the show; and a choir, composed of the leading singers of the opera, rendered, for the first time on any stage, selections from the latest and still unrepresented opera bouffe of the defunct, adapted for the occasion to words of penitence and supplication from the Roman Missal. M. Offenbach died, as we are told, with the consolations of religion; but to those who seriously reflect upon his life and work it seems as if he had carried the habit of burlesque beyond his last breath and literally into the very grave.

It is said, preposterously enough, in his defense, that though he might not be quite proper, he lightened our cares at any rate by making us laugh, as if laughter were always commendable, no matter what we laugh at. But it is impossible to think of Offenbach as a jovial and light-hearted minstrel, who merely transgressed the bounds of decorum now and then through an uncontrollable exuberance of humor and excess of animal spirits. It is said that he began his career as a serious musician, with a reverence for the classical and romantic schools and an ambition to do something in art. He had a fertile and pleasant fancy, with very small knowledge of the science of composition; and his ambition, we suspect, extended no further than a willingness to write good music, provided it did not require hard study, and, above all, provided it paid. Neither of these conditions being attainable (as he learned of experiment), he turned his attention to something else. He tried various plans for making a sensation, more, it must be confessed, like a mountebank than an artist; and he was but moderately successful until, after a careful study of the base, licentious and unbelieving Paris of the second empire, he discovered the only spice that could tickle the jaded palate of that corrupt society. Twenty five years ago, therefore, in the Passage Choiseul, the narrow and crowded center of the life of the boulevards, he opened the Bouffes Parisiens for the express purpose of supplying indecency, in quality and quantity to suit his customers. He became a purveyor of vile entertainments in the same spirit of commercial enterprise which rules the proprietor of a Bowery "dive." He had his reward. He made money and fame. He had set an example of license which brutalized the stage of at least three great countries. He left no fewer than seventy works; nearly all the clean ones were forgotten before his death, and [illegible] will only be remembered [illegible] those [illegible] which he prostituted [illegible] the vilest use of the Gallic [illegible].

There are [illegible] signs of a reaction against the Offenbach school of burlesque, in England and America the reaction is unmistakable. It seems to us one of the many excellences of the style [illegible] opera [illegible] adopted [illegible] by Messrs. Sullivan and Gilbert in England, and now taken up by Messrs. Buck and Cheever in America, that it helps to wean people away from debasing entertainments. The time will come, we dare say, when respectable ladies and gentlemen will blush to remember that they sat through a performance of "Genevieve de Brabant" or "La Vie Parisienne."—[New York Tribune.

The announcement of the usual failure of the eastern mail to arrive last evening was given a tinge of humor by one of the clever clerks who hung out the sign with the following notice: "No Eastern Mail from the Solid South."

Henry Holmes aed Belle Moore, both colored, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony yesterday afternoon at Justice Bentley's office. Holmes was not inclined, but gave it the preference rather than to languish behind the prison bars at Canon City.

It is the prevailing impression with many of our citizens that when the eastern mail fails to arrive one either regular mail trains that it does not come until the following day. Such is not the case for should it fail to come at the regular time it is forwarded by the night trains and is always distributed at eight o'clock in the morning.

Some one spilled some meal on the floor of the postoffice yesterday. An alleged Irishman observing the meal thrust his head through the money order window howled out "O! say, postmasther, there's a lot of mail on the flure out here." The postmaster investigated and will probably send the Irishman a cigar—by mail.

RECEPTION TENDERED TO PROF BLISS

He is Welcomed to Chicago by the Congregational Clergymen

Some days ago the GAZETTE published in its telegraphic columns a dispatch from Chicago giving a brief account of a reception and supper tendered to the Rev C. R Bliss, of this city by the Congregational clergymen of Chicago In a recent number of the Chicago Tribune we find the following account of the affair "A reception and supper was tendered last evening at the Gardner House, to the Rev Prof. C. R. Bliss, of Santa Fe New Mexico, by the Congregational ministers of this city and several leading members of the Congregational churches. After the tables were cleared, Prof. Bliss gave at some length an account of the work done in Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Dakota, under the organization known as the "New West Educational Mission." The professor said the work was being satisfactorily prosecuted as well as the funds at their command would enable them, and the best of results were already manifest, Schools were in operation in Leadville and Trinidad, Colo.; in Las Vegas and Santa Fe, New Mexico; in Salt Lake City, in Spearfish, Dak, and other places. These were all comparatively free schools, the price charged for tuition being not more than $1.50 a month. The intense ignorance of the people of New Mexico, the domination of the Spanish priesthood over them, and the great need of schools and teachers to educate the children, were graphically described. The professor also spoke in relation to the schools in Salt Lake City, and what a power for good they would prove in the future. There was great need for teachers, and especially women who were able to speak the Spanish language.

The Rev. E. F. Goodwin made a few remarks on the necessit existing for immediate work in the direction of education for the people of the territories. Should free schools be denied them much longer, when anmitted into the Union they would become a dangerouse menance to our institutions, because they would easily be controlled by unscrupulous and designing men. Action in the premises should be taken at once.

Colonel C. G. Hammond also spoke briefly, advocating the work undertaken by the mission.

Several other gentlemen advocated the cause of education in the territories, believing the educational mission the best means to promote it.

The mission is under the control of the Congregational denomination, and the officers of the Chicago branch are as follows: President, the Rev. F. A. Noble; treasurer, C. G. Hammond, board of directors, the Revs. E. P. Goodwin, Arthur Little, G. F. S Savage, and Messrs. Simeon Gilbert, E. W. Blatchford, H. W. Austin, and H. Z. Culver.

At the reception last evening there were about sixty ladies and gentlemen present. Among them were E. W. Blatchford and wife, George M. High, Prof. F. W. Fisk, S. M. Moore and wife, H. Z. Culver, C. G. Hammond, the Rev. Dr. Goodwin, Dr. P. H. Hollister, the Rev. G. S. F. Savage and wife. Nearly every Congregational church in the city was represented by its pastor and some of its members.

The affair was very pleasant throughout. Prof. Bliss was warmly commended for his educational work by the ladies and gentlemen present, and guarantees given that the cause should not fail for lack of funds."

COUNTY ELECTION RETURNS.

All In But Those From Four-Mile, which are Expected To-day.

The election returns from all the precincts except Four-Mile have been received by County Clerk Eaton, and it is expected that they will all be in to-day. As soon as they arrive an official count will be made and the full returns will be given in the GAZETTE

We learned yesterday that the vote in Manitou park, cast at Fisher's mill, was strongly republican, being nearly three to one. The republicans cast 23 votes, and the democrats came forward with a showing of only eight ballots. Turkey Creek, however, is the banner republican precinct so far as heard from. At the election before this Turkey Creek went democratic and the republicans took a great pledge that such a thing should not happen this year. They have redeemed their pledge nobly, for as the returns printed in the GAZETTE some days ago show Turkey Creek went republican on the second day of this month by a majority of 5 to 1. There were 19 votes cast in the precinct and 16 of these were republican.

CROSSING GRASSY HILL PASS.

Thirteen Thousand Feet Above the Sea in an Ocean of Snow

From an Occasional Correspondent of the GAZETTE

The snow storm commencing September 12th was unexpected and earlier in the season than usual. Not having any who had contemplated remaining in the San Juan country some weeks longer, but owing to the great depth of snow in and around Silverton, the prices of groceries &c., going up to fabulous prices, the scarcity of provisions, even at exorbitant rates, frightened many that would have remained all winter. The next thing in order, therefore, was to discover how to get out. Three routes, one through New Mexico by Santa Fe; one over the Conejos Range via Animas City, and the shortest, but most dangerous in winter, over Grassy Range, the pass of which crosses a mile above timber line, and is proverbial for its many and terrible snow storms Reports coming in of men and burro's lost in snow slides doubtless influenced the majority to seek the southern route, but your correspondent and two companions, as soon as the back-bone of the snow was broken, started for "God's country" via Grassy Hill Pass. Hearing that a large party had crossed on the 17th, on the 18th we started walking to Howardsville over a well broken trail, with three feet and a half of snow all around us, all through the park in fact. At Howardsville we stopped for refreshments, the sun shining beautifully and warm. We were told it were better if we had left our overcoats behind, as with the exertion of climbing we would soon tire out, but having crossed ranges before, we kept them. We now commenced the ascent up Cunningham gulch, arriving at the forks of Cunningham and Rocky gulches about one o'clock, and bracing ourselves, mounted the zigzag trail for the summit. After an hour of hard climbing, but over a well defined trail, we reached timber line and our adventures had commenced. Here we founn there had been a fall of snow in the morning of several inches and with a strong breeze blowing, the trail had disappeared covered by the drifting snow. Still we marched forward. The snow was deep and had we had a "banner with the strange device; excelsior" we would have imagined ourselves a second edition of the "School Reader Hero." On we marched, nothing but snow, snow, cold pitiless snow. Shaggy and frowning cliffs almost perpendicular on both sides covered with snow hanging suspended in the air, while it seemed a breath would start the dreaded slide, frowned down upon us. We finally reached a small clump of trees far above timber line where we saw several horses and burros hitched. A pitiful sight. They had been left, the owners finding it impossible to take them farther. We kept on, the wind now blowing a gale, the drift snow blinding us. On we pushed, snow up to the waistband. No trail, but we could see, a mile further, where it crossed the the summit and with this for a guide we kept on. One man would break the trail until exhausted, he falling back, another would step into his place, until bewildered, exhausted and almost frozen, we stopped for a lull in the wind storm to see our guide mark. Suddenly away up above us four or five hundred yards we saw a wagon box and a joyful cry burst from us for we knew there was the wagon road and the mail wagon that had been left there during the storm. But what a stretch of snow between us and the beacon! How many deep crevices and abrupt precipices' But bracing up, and thinking of the loved ones at home, on we staggered, and finally reached our goal. Here we left a heavy Sharps' rifle, unable to carry it further. On we waded, sometimes to such a depth would one of us sink that only by the united exertions of the other two could he be extricated. On, on, and upward. The sun went down, and on the clearing away of the clouds the moon shone resplendent, but how cold. However, when almost exhausted, we reached the summit and commenced the descent. Here all was guess work, being the leeward side, the wind had obliterated every vestige of a trail, but carefully we moved down until reaching timber line again, we could not refrain from simultaneously and enthusiastically breaking out with "There's a fairer land than this."

Now being below timber line and protected from the wind, we soon were stumbling along a tolerably well defined trail, and at half-past nine knocked and were admitted into the respectable ranch of Squire Watson, where every kindness was shown us and our tribulations were thought to be at an end. We here met others who had crossed before, barefooted and frozen badly. We congratulated ourselves in escaping unfrozen In a twinkling shoes, boots and stockings were off, and there before us stiff and frozen were our feet, with every sense of feeling gone, with the exception of the most intense and acute pain. The heat of the room let us know that unscathed we had not escaped. A night of misery, and next morning we knew all hopes were over for that day, no shoes, maybe, to be put on for this season. Consoling ourselves as best we might, and phlegmatically wrapping our feet in blankets, we concluded to weather it out. Next morning broke bright and beautiful. The sun shone out in intense heat, the snow sank perceptibly, and thawed a great deal That night it froze hard and next day at about four o'clock in the afternoon, in walked two ladies and three men just over from Silverton. The thawing and freezing had rendered the snow hard and compact and they had walked over the range fifteen miles from Silverton, tired it is true but sound and hearty, and they went on the day following.

Not to be outdone we purchased No. 10 arctics from 'Squire Watson's little store and wrapping each foot in several blankets, more or less, we started and after a whole day's walk we had accomplished seven miles and here at Brewster's ranch heard of a freight wagon to leave in two days from a place lower down for Del Norte So bright and early we started reaching Barker's ranch at 10 o clock, and at 2 o'clock, comfortably seated on grain sacks and straw in a freight wagon, we were on our road under the guidance of Matt Little the boss freighter on this road, and who so skillfully handled his six mules and trail wagon we almost imagined ourselves in a Pullman, and indeed the boys would insist on calling the trail wagon a Pullman palace car. That night we spent with Jeff Galloway in Antelope park. Mr. Galloway is a ranchman on a large scale and one of the most successful hunters in this section, as his museum of stuffed wild animals brought low by his unering rifle while they roamed the mountains can well attest. One of almost all the quadrupeds and bipeds of this region are nicely stuffed and arranged on one side of his store. Among them one could see the cinnamon bear, the mountain lion and others equally as ferocious. He informed us that the Indians had destroyed all they came across, killed and let it lay wantonly, and it seemed as if solely to deprive the white hunters, and this they had never done before.

Our next night was passed at the far-famed mineral springs of Wagon Wheel Gap. Several hot springs are clustered here together—a great resort for those "frozen" feet, where I noticed some fifteen persons, all having frozen feet or hands. Our road of the two preceding days had been from one park to another; it now lay up a narrow canon where ragged walls towered hundreds of feet above us, and not until approaching Del Norte did we reach level country. If ever Goldsmith's "Deserted Village" could be transported and laid in the San Luis valley, then Del Norte is that village. Once a flourishing place of 5,000 inhabitants, a fair city existed there, but like many another town it was built on faith, credulity and expectations. The three have flown, and now bleak despondency hovers incessantly over its deserted hearthstones and tumbling walls. The adobe walls of houses and stores, like the silent houses of Pompeii are roofless, a sad ideal picture of the bustling nature of these United States of America ever shifting.

Bright and early next morning, in one of Barlow & Sanderson's elegant coaches, we soon reached Alamosa, where a narrow double thread of iron connected us with 'Home, Sweet Home."

BOYS IN BLUE

Three Companies of U. S. Cavalry Pass Through the City.

A special train containing companies K, L and G, of the Fourth cavalry, arrived in the city about two o'clock yesterday afternoon on their way to Fort Hayes and Fort Riley. They came from Los Pinos. They remained here until this morning in order to feed and water their horses which had been in transit for 71 hours. The companies consist of about 250 men in command of Captain Lee of the Fourth cavalry, and are destined for Fort Hayes and Fort Riley, where they will take up their winter quarters.

Company G will go to Fort Hayes and companies K and L to Fort Riley. They seem only too glad to get out of the Uncompahgre country, where they have been stationed during the summer for the protection of the whites of that section against the Indians. One of the officers of company K intimated in conversation that they entertained no fears of an outbreak among the Utes this winter, but he was inclined to think that next spring might bring about some difficulty. He said that nearly one-fifth of the standing army was now stationed within the department of the Missouri, and that the number of troops was sufficiently large to protect the entire southern frontier. Companies M and E. of the Fourth cavalry expect to leave Fort Garland to-day for Fort Hayes.

CAN SUCH THINGS BE

Turning on the Water is Said to Have Converted a Democrat

We stated in our report of the mock election which recently took place at Colorado College that some of the students had been detected in the act of casting illegal votes. A warrant was issued against one of the offenders, Jack Higgins by name, and served upon him by the college sheriff. He was arraigned in the college chapel yesterday afternoon, charged with complicity in the crime. Justice Suckelfritz presided with becoming dignity and impressed upon the mind of the prisoner that he was arraigned like Warren Hastings, for high crimes and misdemeanors, that could not be tolerated in this Italian climate The prosecution was ably represented in the person of John Van Landenham while Polycarp P. Lillycamp was retained by the defendant

The case throughout was well fought and reflects much credit on the attorneys on both sides It was clearly proved by several witnesses that the accused, with others, not only cast issue ballots, but compelled a staunch democrat to vote the republican ticket by holding his head under the college pump for hours in succession.

The defense introduced witnesses that swore most emphatically that Higgins was not in the city when the bulldozing occurred, and furthermore that he was a man of honesty and integrity and would not stoop to the degrading act of ballot box stuffing or of holding a "man under a pump Some time was given to arguing the case, following which his honor brought in a verdict of not guilty.
